Chad Miesen advises all types of business organizations and entrepreneurs across many industries, including for-profits, non-profits, and community associations, in all stages of a business's life cycle—from formation to dissolution.

Chad has extensive experience advising condominium and planned community associations, where he demonstrates a profound understanding of the unique challenges and issues facing these specific clients.

Joining our firm in 2007, Chad rapidly ascended to partnership in 2014 and further secured his position as an equity shareholder in 2016. His extensive experience encompasses various facets of corporate law, including corporate organization, reorganization, and governance, as well as private equity and debt financing. He is adept at handling matters related to shareholder and owner relations, buyouts, and dispute resolution, in addition to contract negotiation, supplier and manufacturing agreements, and securities regulation.

Furthermore, Chad brings a wealth of knowledge in joint ventures, strategic alliances, fund formation, corporate asset protection, and succession planning. He has successfully navigated numerous mergers and acquisitions, and his litigation prowess is well-demonstrated through a diverse range of civil cases in both state and federal courts.

Chad also has significant experience representing creditors in bankruptcy and leads the firm's bankruptcy practice. Of notable experience, Chad successfully represented an insolvent condominium association in a bankruptcy case that resulted in a confirmed plan of reorganization and final decree that not only saved the association thousands of dollars but also helped it to be a thriving community once again.
